ment of Agriculture.) Energetic measures against the Missouri but to corn as well are urged by the bureau of entomology, United States Department of Agriculture, in view of reports of an impending outbreak of the pest in that state. Widespread and severe infestations of the pest are reported in the whole central Mississippi valley region, starting in northern Texas and extending in a northeasterly direction over Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri, touching Nebraska, and extending across Illinois and Indiana into Mich-

The chinch bugs, latest advices say, have had a mild winter and are generally distributed throughout the Missouri wheat and rye fields, breeding in considerable numbers in the St. Louis neighborhood early in May. The farmers, it is said, have been watching the pest more closely than usual this spring, but all of them do not know yet that there is danger that their corn may be damaged worse than normal last year.
